DETAILED ACTION

1. The amendment filed on 01 August 2005 has been noted and made of record.
2. Claims 1-23 have been presented for examination.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-23 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
4. See further rejections that follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
6. Claims 1-15 and 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 6,339,826 to Hayes, Jr. et al., in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,009,475 to Shrader, hereinafter Shrader.
7. As per claims 1, 8, 9, and 23, Hayes teaches a computer system, comprising:
memory (Fig 2, element 212); and a security application configured to display a list of security rules for locking down resources of said computer system (col. 19, lines 50-55), said security application configured to enable a set of said security rules, based on inputs from a user (Fig 17), and to cause said computer system to enforce said enabled set of security rules by modifying a machine state of said computer system (col. 20, lines 1-5), said information based on data stored in said memory (col. 17, lines 60-64).

8. Hayes does not disclose said security application further configured to enable said user to select one of said Security rules and to display information describing said selected rule in response to a selection of said one rule by said user.

9. Shrader teaches said security application further configured to enable said user to select one of said security rules and to display information describing said selected rule in response to a selection of said one rule by said user (column 5, line 38 to column 6, line 34, column 8, lines 5-18).

10. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made for the security application to be configured to enable said user to select one of said security rules and to display information describing said selected rule in response to a selection of said one rule by said user, since Shrader states at column 1, line 6 to column 2, line 2 that such a modification would be an improvement to the user interface, thereby making the interface user friendly by preventing an administrator from writing information down from a plurality of screens.

11. Regarding claims 2 and 10, Hayes teaches said security application is configured to display said information immediately in response to said selection (col. 17, lines 65-66).

12. Regarding claims 3 and 11, Hayes teaches said security application is configured to display said list within a window (Fig 17), said window including a plurality of selectable icons (icon besides "Members, Subgroups and Applet Permission", in Fig 17), said security application further configured to display different sets of information describing said selected rule in response to selections of different ones of said icons (Fig 17, right side of menu).

13. Regarding claims 4 and 12, Hayes teaches said security application is configured to display a main window (Fig 17), said security application further configured to display rules of said list in a first sub-window (window of Members) of said main window and to display said information describing said selected rule in a second sub-window of said main window (window of Applet Permission).

14. With regards to claims 5 and 13, Hayes teaches said security application is configured to categorize said list of rules (col. 19, lines 55-67), said security application further configured to display categories of said rules in a third sub-window of said main window (Applet Permission of Fig 17).

15. Concerning claims 6 and 14, Hayes teaches said security application is configured to enable said user to select one of said categories and is configured to display, in said first sub-window, rules of said list that are associated with one of said categories presently selected by said user (col. 19, line 50 col. 20, line 17).

16. Concerning claim 7 and 15, Hayes teaches said main window includes a plurality of selectable icons (icon besides "Members, Subgroups and Applet Permission", in Fig 17), said security application further configured to display in said second sub-window different sets of information describing said selected rule in response to selections of different ones of said icons (window of Applet Permission).

17. Claims 16-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hayes in view of Shrader as applied above, and further in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,720,033 to Deo, hereinafter Deo.

18. Regarding claims 16 and 17, Hayes and Shrader do not teach wherein said selecting is performed while said list of security rules, including said one security rule, is being displayed via said displaying a list of security rules.

19. Deo discloses wherein said selecting is performed while said list of security rules, including said one security rule, is being displayed via said displaying a list of security rules (Figure 1 [block 14]; column 8, lines 3-19).

20. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made for the selecting to be performed while said list of security rules, including said one security rule, is being displayed via said displaying a list of security rules, since Deo states at column 8, lines 3-19 that such a modification would allow a user to add, edit and change rules as they applied to various applications.

21. With regards to claims 18, 21, and 22, Shrader teaches said displaying said information describing said selected rule in a second sub-window are performed simultaneously (column 9, lines 54-63).

Art Unit: 2131

22. Hayes and Shrader do not teach wherein said displaying rules of said list in a first sub-window.

23. Deo teaches wherein said displaying rules of said list in a first sub-window (Figure 1 [block 14]; column 8, lines 3-19).

24. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to display the list of rules in a separate window, since Deo states at column 8, lines 3-19 that such a modification would allow a user to add, edit and change rules as they applied to various applications.

25. Regarding claims 19 and 20, Hayes and Shrader do not teach wherein said selection of said one rule occurs while said one rule is being displayed to said user.

26. Deo discloses wherein said selection of said one rule occurs while said one rule is being displayed to said user (column 7, lines 54-60).

27. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made for the selection of said one rule to occur while said one rule was being displayed to said user, since Deo states at column 8, lines 3-19 that such a modification would allow a user to apply the appropriate rule to the appropriate application, i.e. financial or personnel records.
